

Projects to Work On

The Business Law Section is looking for a few good (young or new to the profession) lawyers to work with some of the most prominent business law practitioners in Texas on our projects. Both law students and lawyers with less than five years of experience in practice should apply. Each Fellow will be paired with an expert in the project subject to work on a defined, specific project over the course of one year. Here are some examples of projects we have tee'd up:

Digital Journal. Good business lawyers need advice from other practitioners about the practical problems they are trying to solve. Since 1983, the Business Law Section has been fielding articles with a practical bent written by practicing business lawyers. This project would have the Fellow sourcing and curating the best practical articles from the business law press and journals around the country; getting in touch with authors and asking their permission to publish articles on our website; and organizing online "symposia" webinars around common topics in the articles. A great way to thoroughly learn about a particular area of practice.

TX Business Courts. Part of making Texas a great place to do business is proactively monitoring our case law and lending our expertise to judges. This project would have the Fellow working with a mentor to monitor Texas Business Court for cases with important business law issues; bringing them to Section leadership for decisions about whether to organize amici briefs; being present with the decision-making process; and writing case notes on the cases chosen to be published on our website.

Short Articles on Timely Topics. For a long time, the Business Law Section has sponsored and published the Texas Journal of Business Law. After a COVID-related hiatus, we published a new report from our Legal Opinions committee giving advice on how to give legal opinions relating to Texas corporations. It is the first in a series of updates to a greater body of work done 30+ years ago. We are thinking about how to carry that tradition on and are working on short articles (6-8 pages plus footnotes) on business law topics. Fellows would work with an experienced practitioner to draft and edit these articles to be published online as the TJBL.

Resource Centers. The Section has experts working on content for Section members in a number of substantive areas of the law, including Artificial Intelligence, Business Drafting, M&A Transactions, Legal Opinions, TX Business Courts and Securities Law. This project would have the Fellow working with those experts to determine what the fundamental knowledge base should include in the Resource Center for that area of law and help source that information; gain experience with the types of content that are most useful to attorneys, other professionals and business clients in today's environment; and help design how members can interact with that content entirely online. The AI Resource Center, for instance, will tackle how to use AI in a business law practice.

Legal Publishing and Professional Brand. How does any attorney new to the profession become known for expertise and build a practice that follows him or her wherever the attorney goes? In today's very online world, that requires skill in content marketing and creation of a professional network both online and in person. This project would have the Fellow learn about web content management systems ("CMS"), how they affect (and sometimes limit) how an attorney's content can be displayed and how to post content within a CMS for a website; how social media platforms are used for content marketing purposes and practice in creating content marketing for the Section; how to maintain a legal content library online; and how to engage a professional network online.

Annotated Forms. Business law practitioners are looking for guidance on drafting different kinds of contracts and also gaining the benefit of expertise from other practitioners in the field. This project would have the Fellow draft one or more template agreements for governing documents or other common contracts used in the practice; work with a Mentor to add professional expertise and practice tips.
